

THE WILDERNESS CENTER, INC.

NEWS RELEASE FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Dan Buehler, President
Gordon T. Maupin, Executive Director
Vicki Capps, Marketing/PR
P.O. Box 202
Wilmot, OH 44689 – 0202
(330) 359-5235
August 5, 2008

Contact: Vicki Capps

www.wildernesscenter.org

www.foxfieldpreserve.org

The Wilderness Center's Nature Preserve Cemetery: Foxfield Preserve opens to serve the public on August 1, 2008

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE -- Wilmot, Ohio --August 4, 2008: The Wilderness Center (TWC) is the first conservation organization in the nation to develop a nature preserve cemetery, Foxfield Preserve. The preserve, which is located on TWC property approximately one mile from their satellite property, near Wilmot, Ohio, will have only natural burials, sometimes called "green burials," on land covered in forest and prairie grass. Foxfield Preserve is open and ready to serve the public.

Foxfield Preserve's completely legal and eco-friendly, natural burial includes a biodegradable container, such as a shroud or wooden casket. There is no embalming. It is the true 'dust to dust' form of burial.

One of the benefits of a natural preserve cemetery like Foxfield Preserve is that it provides a wildlife habitat. A visit to Foxfield will be a visit to a nature preserve. Natural headstones and native plants can be used as headstone markers.

Foxfield Preserve provides an economical, environmental alternative to modern burial. As a nature preserve, Foxfield maintains a clean water shed, clean air and walking trails. It also saves on the cost of vaults, metal caskets and embalming. It is the only natural burial preserve in the state of Ohio.

As a final resting place, Foxfield supports wildlife, the environment and nature education. It's a great way to leave a legacy. Proceeds from Foxfield Preserve will be used for TWC's endowment, land conservation and education.

For more information on Foxfield Preserve Nature Cemetery, visit us online at www.foxfieldpreserve.org or call Jennifer Quinn, Preserve Stewart at 330-763-1331.

The Wilderness Center is a nonprofit nature center located one mile west of Wilmot, Ohio just north of highway 250. The Center is dedicated to Nature Education, Wildlife Conservation, Natural History Research, and Community Service. The Center derives its support from memberships and donations. It is not a government agency and is not supported by taxes.